

Basketball, Football, Track, Weight Lifting.....Do you have any interest in these sports, or do you want to learn more about them? If you answered YES, Paul might be the guy for you!

Paul recently started participating in these sports and really enjoys them. However, Paul needs a family to help get him on track academically so that he can ensure his continued “spot” on the teams. Paul expressed that he is not necessarily looking for parents, but that if there is someone who wants to help him with his schoolwork, and understands that he won’t always be “awesome”, that he may be willing to take the next step!

Paul likes social studies, but not science or math. Paul explained that he is not always the most organized person, and that sometimes hinders him with school. Paul likes to attend church and needs a family that is going to continue to provide him with a faith based life. Paul’s short term goal is to get better grades in school and his long term goal is to join the military and attend college.
